According to a club source, Orlando has reached out to established center back Steven Beitashour of the Vancouver Whitecaps. The team is interested in a younger DP and is also actively looking at collecting as much information about a potential new signing as possible, including speaking with its current roster and recruiting new talent. Beitashour, 31, joins a growing list of players interested in joining the Lions. MLS expansion draft rules were announced last week. The Whitecaps were clearly the most active team in the offseason and were able to retain Beitashour and U.S. international Justin Morrow as well as adding Brazilian forward Rossi and defender Mitch Ingerse. As the reigning Canadian and American champions, the

Both were unvaccinated and were quarantined in their own bedrooms during their hospitalizations for measles symptoms — a case of what public health experts say is a growing problem in the United States, where most adults have gotten at least two doses of the measles vaccine. Seventeen cases of measles have been reported since the start of this year in California, including three that are connected to Disneyland, the Los Angeles Times reported Tuesday. No measles cases have been reported in California since 2013, when there were two hundred and fifty cases in the state. In the absence of the measles vaccine, young children can get the disease through unvaccinated people who have active measles, according to the Centres for Disease aa67ecbc25
