■ SNSD's JYEPY "It's a game that will have you rolling around with laughter, and at the same time... It has heart. An enjoyable experience with a lot of replay value. Even if you don't like one of the characters you can probably play the game as any other character. One thing that I thought was a bit strange though, the story is nothing but flashbacks. But then again, it was a while since I played an RPG where all the important things happened in-game before you get to see the story. It's been a long time since I've had an RPG that gave me that much fun and satisfaction." ■ NAO's OGGY "Even though I only played the single player, I had fun so much. The game has witty dialogue and the story is full of comedy, so even though I'm not so sure if I understood the story, it was a roller coaster experience from the beginning to the end. I personally felt like it wasn't boring at all, at the very least it kept me playing for a few days. Thank you to Naplan from Team N, for offering us this game!" ■ FUMU's MEI "I got so swept away in this game that I played it continuously for three days straight. After I finished the game I could still think about it, and I couldn't even wait for the next day to come. If you're a fan of RPGs, or of making friends, I recommend this game. If you haven't played an RPG in a long time, or are tired of playing RPGs... well, then I think you should give this one a go. It's a fun ride." ■ REA's KEMI "I'm way beyond the game as of now. I played it twice and I'll play it as many times as it takes to get all the rewards." ■ HEROFI's NOBU "As someone who's new to RPGs, I've bff6bb2d33

What's new in Elden Ring:

Trey Parker and Matt Stone's still-in-development cartoon TV show for Adult Swim has the basic premise of a weary ex-cop protecting a group of eccentric amnesiacs from the forces of evil. We spoke with Parker and Stone when we got the chance to see South Park: Bigger, Longer, and Uncut back in 2010, even though we didn't get to cover that interview's full breadth of questions. (I had to run off with their entire slate of questions for another interview.) From Left to Right: May Stone, Cartman, Stan, Kyle, Odenwald, Chef Then, it's plain that Parker and Stone's own style shines through even in this 30 minute present/past late night meeting. The uneven visuals, mixed-up character placement, and racy satire mixed with a flat script can only be matched by the awe-inspired occurrences of a stopped clock being right twice a day. This next season is shaping up to be a fun and engaging little exercise in cynical chaos. And that makes me sound like I'm being uncaring, but truth be told, this is the first season for me. You know what that means? SPOILER ALERT. I like South Park. Actually, I love the show. South Park should be as timeless as caffeine and loves. It should have been this way from the beginning. Clinton is arriving in neighboring Pakistan today, the first official visit since the U.S. President's announcement to begin an "exit strategy" from Afghanistan. NPR's Jackie Northam has been traveling with Secretary Clinton, and she joins us now to tell us more about the visit. Good morning Jackie. JACKIE NORTHAM, BYLINE: Good morning. SIEGEL: Now how is Secretary Clinton expected to help develop a national consensus in Afghanistan? NORTHAM: Well, I think from her perspective, she's going to be talking about the need to have a national consensus, particularly about how the U.S. government is going to pull out of Afghanistan, what that transition means, what are the challenges the Afghans are facing in particular. And she is expected to use her platform as the top U.S. diplomat in the world to push the Afghan government and the Karzai government to finally sign a bilateral security agreement, or BSA, so that the U.S. military can begin to withdraw our troops from Afghanistan and the Afghan government can begin to assume responsibility for the security of the country itself. SIEGEL: So she needs to talk about how the U.S. should pull out and what should be the success and failure criterion of any transition? NORTHAM: Well, she will be talking about that as well, Jackie, but I think her message today will be that she's going to be reinforcing the U.S. commitment to Afghanistan, and U.S. support for the Afghan government, and she is going to be urging the Afghan government, the Karzai government, to begin to come
