What's new:

Card-Holding November 17, 2012 Feelin' Lucky? Our four-season cottage is right on the water. It must be at least 30 feet above the lake, but it also has a great view up and down the lake, so we can enjoy the best of all four seasons. Right now the lake is inviting — mostly calm waves, and a little wind but no rain. It's really a pretty lake. This is our third time back here at the cottage this fall. Between Michelle's parents and my parents, we've spent time in all four seasons of the year. It's always good to get away, especially when it's all about spending time with friends and family. Good Friday morning, was out on the back porch, enjoying the morning quiet and getting busy with tasks around here. I need to go to town to get some grocery items for the weekend. Roughly three hours and counting for bus to get home. I'm going to enjoy the ride if it keeps the snow away! On our return trip, Michelle, saw some interesting leaves form on a tree. It had happened on our trip to the cottage last week also, but then she and I couldn't see the tree. This time, we saw just the leaves. We have a similar tree with lovely rose-spotted leaves. Michelle asked me why those leaves were brown. It was clear to her I didn't know. She was reminded she'd missed one tree while I was visiting relatives back home. It still has some gorgeous green leaves. I must have missed them. I mean, I can tell the color of the leaf on that balsam tree, but I don't know anything about that unusual pattern. I'll have to learn. I caught a perfect view of the balsam this day. I'll make a duplicate this winter. The slower we go on our two-bus trip this time will not just help the bus load go faster. Whom to Choose After we got back from Kansas City, I was in a mixed-up state of mind. I was thinking about who to choose to play Soloist this winter. You know, the name of the game we play two or three times a week during the winter, where we have to keep our picture cards in an open position
