DirectX®: version 11.-way stop, while the injured person must proceed onto the roadway to yield to the approaching vehicle. The trial court correctly charged the jury on the Lautensack case. Since the evidence did not establish that the place where defendant was driving was "the only practicable route to another point", the trial court was correct in refusing to charge on the two-way stop. The instructions were correct and the evidence did not warrant the application of the two-way stop rule. Under cross-examination the witness Ebeling, the driver of the mannequin truck, was asked whether he had been arrested before and replied that he had been arrested "four or five times". The Court said: "Now I'll say that you have a good memory, because I was asking other people about this yesterday and they said four or five times. "MR. GRIMES: I think he's asked enough. "THE COURT: We know what you're talking about, Mr. Grimes. He
